

American Council of Life Insurers (ACLI) International Relations Internship

ACLI is a Washington, D.C.-based trade association. Its member companies offer life insurance, annuities, pensions, long-term care insurance, disability income insurance and other retirement and financial protection products. It serves as a unified voice on issues from retirement security to international trade. ACLI develops policy, participates in public debate, and works directly with the U.S. Federal Government, International Financial Institutions, state insurance regulators as well as insurance supervisors from around the world.

Internships are open to applicants from all fields of study that have an interest in international relations, financial services, politics, government, or the life insurance field. Interns do not receive salaries, but receive payment for their daily commutes and occasional invitations to attend various special meetings, receptions, etc. Interns also receive the following benefits:

- Receive course credits, in certain cases
- Strengthen your resume
- Gain practical work experience
- Better prepare yourself for the job market
- Network with colleagues

Requirements

Interns must be in their senior year of university or a graduate student. The intern program is designed for you to become a part of our team and gain experience working within a trade association in international relations. Interns must be proficient in Microsoft (Windows, Word, and Excel), deadline-oriented, attentive to detail and a self-starter. They must also possess excellent oral and written communication skills.
